Administrative Order No. 49
Series of 2002

SUBJECT: Guidelines in the Psychosocial Care of Victims of Disasters and Families in Crisis Situations

I. Rationale

Geographically, the Philippines is vulnerable to natural disasters such as typhoons, flashfloods, earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. Man-made disasters such as armed-conflict, fire, technological hazards as well as maritime and air disasters further aggravate the situation. Other situations that put families into crisis include squatter demolition resulting to displacement of population. These are seen as continuing threats to the psychosocial well being of the affected families.

The impact/effect of disasters are causing setbacks on the development and growth of the country's economy in general and the well being of the affected families/individuals in particular. Between 1995-2000, different types of disasters affected an average of 1.5 million families annually in almost 41,939 barangays of the country. Such situations result to massive displacements of families. The manifestations of disasters are easily projected to the whole country with its physical impact and effects to the population and the economy.

Equally important, however, are the internal forces within the victim/affected individuals/families. This includes the psychosocial consequences as a result of any sudden significant disruption to their normal functioning. If no action is undertaken to minimize, prevent, or eliminate these abnormal manifestations, these could lead to disability far worse than we can imagine. Very often, because of the stressful condition, the individual's and families' social functioning are hampered and their capabilities deteriorate. In situations like these, there is a need for psychosocial care to help them cope with and address the actual as well as potential physical and psychosocial consequences of extraordinarily challenging events or circumstances in their environment.
II. Objectives

General Objectives:

To enhance/strengthen the families/victims/survivors' coping capacities during disaster and crisis situations through the provision of psychosocial care.

Specific Objectives:

1. To advocate for the protection of individuals and families vulnerable to disasters and other crisis situations.

2. To continuously equip/develop the knowledge, skills and expertise of DSWD and local disaster service providers in the provision of psychosocial care to victims of disasters.

3. To provide augmentation support to LGUs, NGOs to enable individuals, families and communities affected by disaster and other crisis situations to better serve and rapidly restore their normal functioning.

III. Project Description

Psychosocial care refers to helping people cope with, and address the actual as well as potential physical, and psychological consequence of extraordinarily challenging events or circumstance in their environment. These may include natural and man-made disasters, violence and other serious threats to life and/or well being. Natural disasters are classified as destruction/damages brought about by typhoons, landslides, volcanic eruptions and the like. Likewise, man-made disasters are the result of technological hazards such as oil spill in mining areas, air and sea tragedies, armed conflict and other disasters which are the product of human failures.

The aim of psychosocial care is to rapidly restore a sense of normalcy and enhance individual, familial and community stability. Such action which should be primarily social in nature and empowerment oriented is envisaged to protect and strengthen coping capacities, reduce stress and familial/community tensions, and prevent threats to social and psychological well-being.

Psychosocial care encompasses promotion, prevention, relief and rehabilitation and therapeutic interventions related to disaster management and other crisis situations. It involves varied approaches such as training and advocacy, technical assistance and augmentation support through community organizing, case management and group work methods.

The service shall provide a holistic approach to disaster management and emergency assistance both for the DSWD, the Local Government Units and the NGOs in terms of the provision of technical assistance on psychosocial care services. Current retain deployment and those devoted to the LGUs will form part of the psychosocial interventions and not limited to the CISD strategy. This will also include services to victims of other crisis situations like squatter demolition, death, separation from work, sickness among others. The service will be institutionalized in partnership with the LGUs, NGOs and other members of the civil society.
