SUBJECT: AMENDED IMPLEMENTING GUIDELINES ON THE MANAGEMENT OF DSWD OPERATED
CRISIS INTERVENTION UNIT

I. RATIONALE

People from all walks of life usually migrate to urban centers, believing that there are more opportunities for a better life in the city. However, they often lack skills needed to compete with other job seekers in the cities, and find themselves jobless and living in the slums and squatter areas. Most of the families end themselves in difficult circumstances and, therefore, become vulnerable to prostitution, illegal recruitment, begging and the likes.

In addition, there is also an alarming increase in the cases of domestic violence reported in the country. The number of wife abuse cases in the country per PNP figures had a marked increased to 5,668 in 2001 from 3,824 and 2,413 in 2000 and 1999 respectively. In homes where violence occurs, all members are at-risk to trauma and other unpleasant behaviors that will most likely haunt them. Such condition creates stress on individuals and families, which affect their role performance, thus, creating problems not only in the individual and the family, but also in the community as a whole. The absence of a support system further aggravates the problem.

Meantime, disaster situations continue to be a major concern of DSWD, despite the devolution of disaster emergency services to the local government units. These situations are aggravated when the affected families have no support systems and the LGUs are not capable of providing needed services.

These problems and issues need quick response from the government. Thus, Crisis Intervention Units (CIU) are maintained to provide immediate response to crisis situations affecting individuals and families, who are not considered constituents of LGUs where they are situated during the occurrence of crisis, or when their respective LGUs cannot respond to their needs.
